Make feedback useful and accessible

Assessment

ASSESSMENT ONE-PAGE PRACTICAL GUIDE

WHAT IS THIS FOR?

Give students feedback they can understand, access and use in their next piece of work.

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

Give students feedback they can understand, access and use in their next piece of work.

WHAT DOES THIS LOOK LIKE?

Students can understand the feedback, access it in a usable form and see what to do next.

WHAT CAN I DO?

- Identify the most important next move rather than listing every weakness.
- Use respectful language that treats the student as a developing learner.
- Offer accessible feedback modes where feasible.
- Create a later opportunity to apply the feedback.

EXAMPLE IN PRACTICE

A student receives the rubric, short written priorities and an optional audio explanation, then applies the feedback in the next assessment.

STARTING POINT TO ADAPT

For the next teaching period, our team will: identify the most important next move rather than listing every weakness; use respectful language that treats the student as a developing learner. We will review student feedback and adjust if needed.
