Inclusive assessment adjustments

Have I built common adjustments into assessment?

WHAT IS IT?

Flexible arrangements are built in, without requiring disclosure

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

The same course requirement can land very differently depending on time, money, care, disability, work, housing or confidence. Equity asks whether students with different lives have a real opportunity to participate and succeed, rather than simply receiving the same rule.

THE STUDENT EXPERIENCE

- “This course assumes university is the only thing happening in my life.”
- “I can technically enrol, but the way this is organised makes participation fragile.”

HOW CAN I DO IT?

- Design short extensions, alternative participation routes or recovery options as normal features where appropriate.
- Keep disclosure requirements proportionate to the decision being made.
- Explain the pathway before students need it.

EXAMPLE IN PRACTICE

A course offers a simple two-day self-certified extension for most minor disruptions, reducing the need to narrate private circumstances.

STARTING POINT TO ADAPT

For this assessment, we aim to build common flexibility into assessment timing and arrangements where the learning outcome does not require one fixed format. The learning outcomes being assessed are [insert outcomes].
