Re-engaging disengaged students

Do I notice disengagement and reach out early?

EQUITY / TEACHING

ONE-PAGE TEACHING GUIDE

WHAT IS IT?

Engagement data is monitored, with proactive outreach to disengaged students

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

The same course requirement can land very differently depending on time, money, care, disability, work, housing or confidence. Equity asks whether students with different lives have a real opportunity to participate and succeed, rather than simply receiving the same rule.

THE STUDENT EXPERIENCE

- “This course assumes university is the only thing happening in my life.”
- “I can technically enrol, but the way this is organised makes participation fragile.”

HOW CAN I DO IT?

- Notice patterns early rather than waiting for failure.
- Use low-stakes outreach that communicates care rather than surveillance.
- Make the route back into the course simple and specific.

EXAMPLE IN PRACTICE

A tutor emails absent students with one short message: what was missed, what to do next, and where to get help.

STARTING POINT TO ADAPT

In this course, we aim to notice patterns of disengagement early and use supportive outreach rather than assuming lack of commitment. If the way a class or learning activity is organised makes it harder for you to…

GO FURTHER AT UQ

Explore Course Teaching Feedback at UQ

Learning analytics

Course Teaching Feedback